RAMADAN
Ramadan, the first day of the ninth holy month of the Islamic calendar of the same name, began yesterday, Tuesday. During this period, Muslims from across the world observe fast and abstain from eating and drinking water from dawn to dusk.

The ninth lunar month is considered the most sacred month of the Islamic calendar, because it was when the Holy book of Quran was revealed to Prophet Muhammad.

It is believed that the practice of fasting and giving charity will bestow blessings upon each person. The holy month begins after the sighting of the new moon to the naked eye and lasts from 29 to 30 days after the beginning of the month. However, this year saw Muslims begin the fast on different days due to the disagreements over the start of the holy month.
